CHILDREN AT RISK ACTION NETWORK

CRANE connects communities, churches, schools and systems so children are safe, thriving and learning—today and for generations because...

Every child deserves a safe place to become...

VISION

Children are safe, well, and thriving in God's plan as they fulfil their God-given potential

MISSION

We connect people and organisations to build a future where children in Uganda are safe, thriving and learning.

We do that by using 4 building blocks of networking:

- 1. Connecting
Bringing people, communities and institutions together.
- 2. Capacity Building
Strengthening the skills, confidence and practice of those who support children.
- 3. Collective Action
Enabling people and organisations to work together towards shared outcomes.
- 4. Catalysing Change
Turning collective learning and action into lasting change in systems, practice and policy.

STRATEGY

Impact grows when local people have the tools, trust and networks to act

CRANE strengthens the people and systems surrounding children—not isolated projects—so progress can last.

Our shared ambition

We have three outcomes in our line of sight

Children are safe

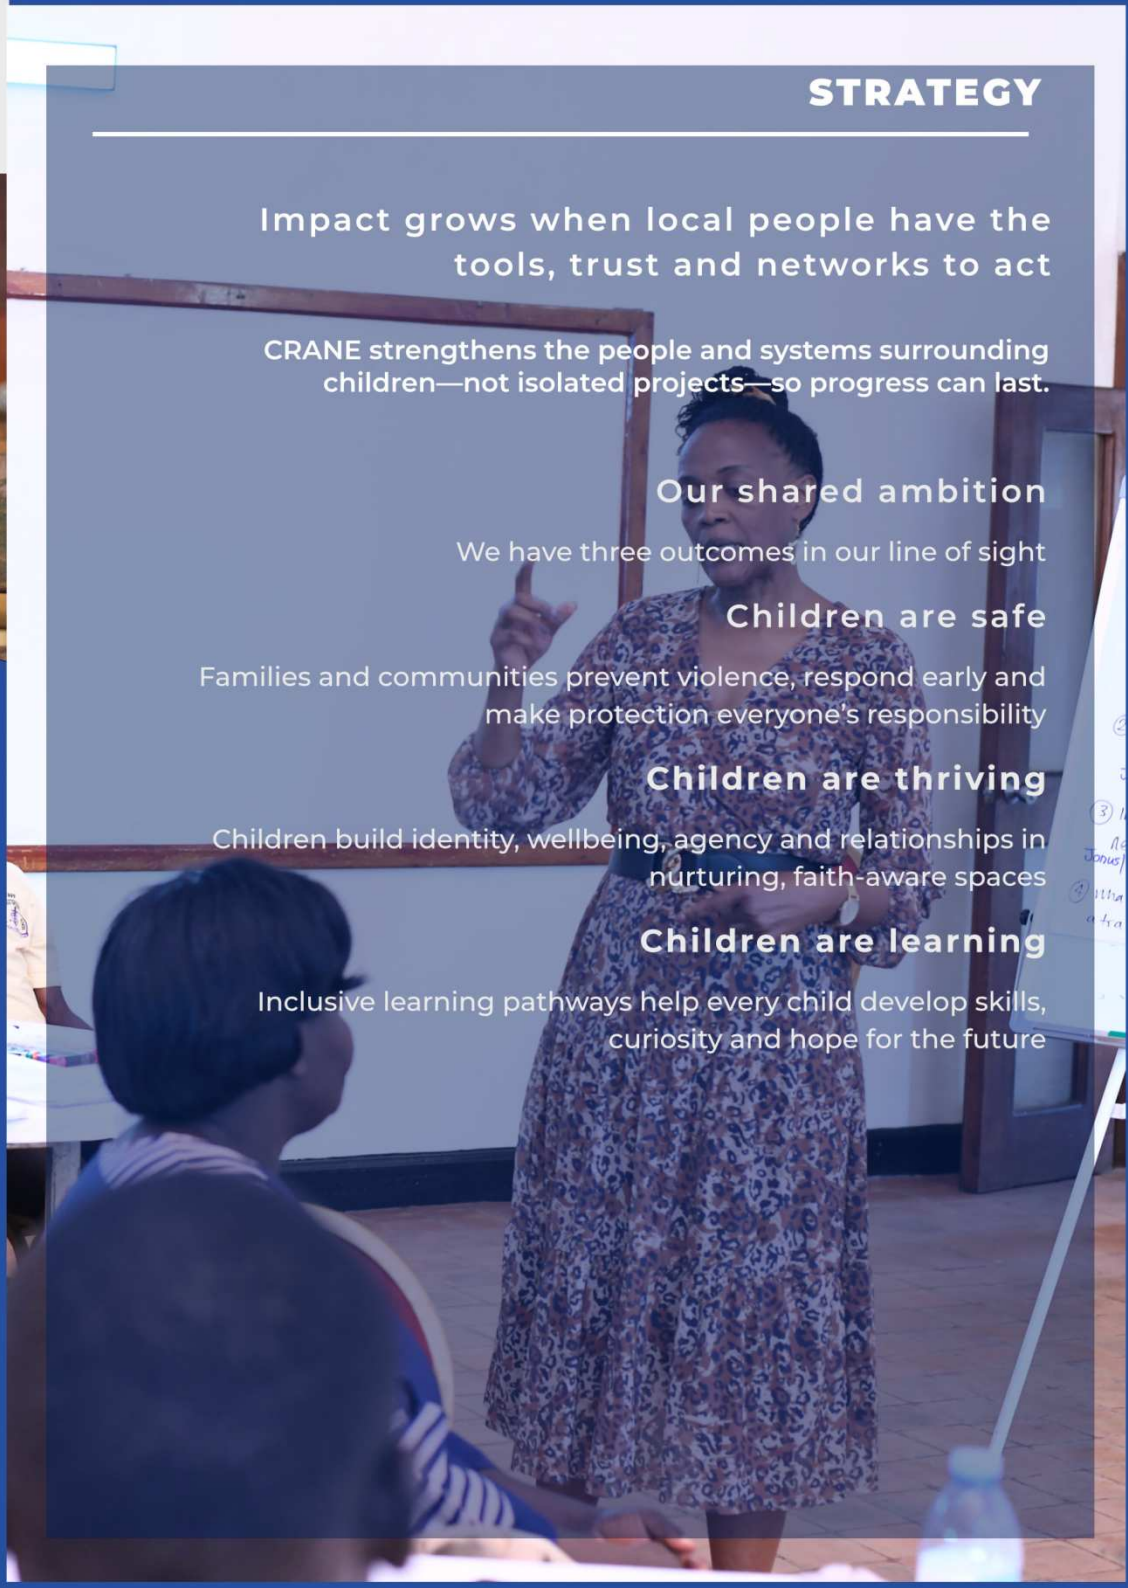

Families and communities prevent violence, respond early and make protection everyone's responsibility

Children are thriving

Children build identity, wellbeing, agency and relationships in nurturing, faith-aware spaces

Children are learning

Inclusive learning pathways help every child develop skills, curiosity and hope for the future

TWO OUTSTANDING STORIES

FROM SURVIVING ABUSE TO HELPING CHILDREN THRIVE

What happens when a child finally finds the courage to speak out? Through her Safe Club, child ambassador mentor Felista discovered that one girl was being abused at home, denied basic needs and forced to sell mangoes late into the night. Drawing on her own experience of abuse, Felista spoke with the girl's aunt, helping bring about change. Now the girl attends school, has what she needs and is thriving. Inspired by those who once helped her, Felista is determined to help other children find their voice and stand tall.

"I remember that there are things that I went through in life that I don't want other children to go through...so I keep going." Felista

FROM FEAR TO LOVE: A FATHER'S CHANGE

What happens when a father learns a new way to love his children? Fred Gadya admits he once struggled to handle his children, with little love in their relationship. Through CRANE's positive parenting training, he discovered the power of kindness, friendship and working together. As he changed, his children grew closer to him. Now Fred is taking that lesson beyond his own home, encouraging other fathers to reject discrimination and harsh treatment and raise their children with love and respect.

"I didn't know how to handle children. There was no love. After the training, I became loving to my children, and I started helping other fathers to do the same." Fred

Chairman

Pr. Andrew Mwenge

We thank God for bringing us through another year. Although the funding environment has become increasingly challenging, CRANE and its members have continued to make a real difference in the lives of children. Across our network, people have shown faith, commitment and creativity, finding ways to help children live, learn and thrive.

It reminds me of the story of Joseph in Egypt, when seven years of abundance were followed by seven years of famine. After many years of growth and opportunity, we too are facing a season of reduced funding. Yet Joseph's story reminds us of the importance of wisdom, preparation and faith when times are difficult.

As this report shows, there is much to celebrate. Children are finding their voices, families are discovering more positive ways to care for their children, churches are strengthening safeguarding, and children are finding opportunities to learn and flourish. Across our network, members are working together, sharing knowledge and creating practical solutions that make a lasting difference.

I am deeply grateful to our staff, members, partners and supporters for their commitment and hard work. As we look ahead, we do so with gratitude for what has been achieved, confidence in the strength of our network, and faith that God will continue to guide us as we work together for children's safety, wellbeing and learning.

SHALOM — BRINGING PEACE BY PURSUING JUSTICE FOR CHILDREN

When I think about CRANE, I keep coming back to Shalom — bringing peace by pursuing justice for children, strengthening families and restoring hope.

At CRANE, we believe that peace begins with the child and the family. Children experience the consequences of conflict, broken relationships, violence, abuse, neglect and family breakdown. When a child is unsafe, there is no true peace.

Our work is about protecting children, strengthening families and equipping the people and organisations around them to help children and families thrive. At the heart of this is our belief that every child is precious to God. A child is not a burden to be tolerated, but a life to be protected, nurtured, valued and given the opportunity to flourish. When children are safe, families are strengthened; when families are strengthened, communities become more peaceful.

This is the peace we seek to build.

This is the justice we pursue.

This is why CRANE exists.

CHILDREN ARE SAFE - LIFE IN ALL ITS FULNESS

SAFE CHILDREN. STRONGER COMMUNITIES

Protection becomes part of everyday life—not a response after harm

Every child deserves to grow up free from abuse, with people they can trust and the confidence to speak up when something is wrong. Yet many face abuse, neglect and unsafe environments. The adults caring for them do not always have the knowledge or resources to protect them effectively. This ERIKS-funded project reaches across the network to empower children and adults to see children safe and thriving, living life in all its fulness.

CRANE worked with children, families, churches, schools and community organisations to strengthen protection systems around children. CRANE helped children understand their rights, equipped adults to recognise and respond to risks, and brought local actors together to listen to children. Children said they feel safer. Members are better at managing cases of abuse.

"I have learnt to think things through before I act."

"I should always speak encouraging words to others."

I HAVE A VOICE.
I CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE

Through their Safe Clubs, children are finding their voices, discovering their rights and learning how to protect themselves and others. They are speaking out about child abuse, cyberbullying and mental health, while learning that leadership means listening, respecting others and learning from mistakes.

For these Child Ambassadors, learning is only the beginning. They are determined to share what they know with their peers, help solve problems together and make their communities safer.

CRANE equips mentors with the knowledge and skills to guide children, who then pass their learning on to other children. This is how children's voices grow stronger, reach further and become a force for change.

SEE SOMETHING WRONG? SPEAK UP

Children Know What Needs to Change... Who better to show us what makes a community unsafe than the children who live in it? At CRANE's Safe Club Community Outreach, child ambassadors turned their own experiences and community mapping into songs, poems and skits exposing the issues adults can overlook: children working in dangerous sand mines, abuse and rubbish clogging water channels.

Their message was clear: children need protection, a clean environment and adults who listen. As stakeholders pledged to work with them, these young changemakers showed that children are not just people to protect—they are powerful voices in building safer communities.

"I learned that we should always report cases of child abuse."

"I have learned that keeping the environment clean is my responsibility. we should stop putting rubbish in the trenches."

GROWING UP IN A COMPLEX WORLD

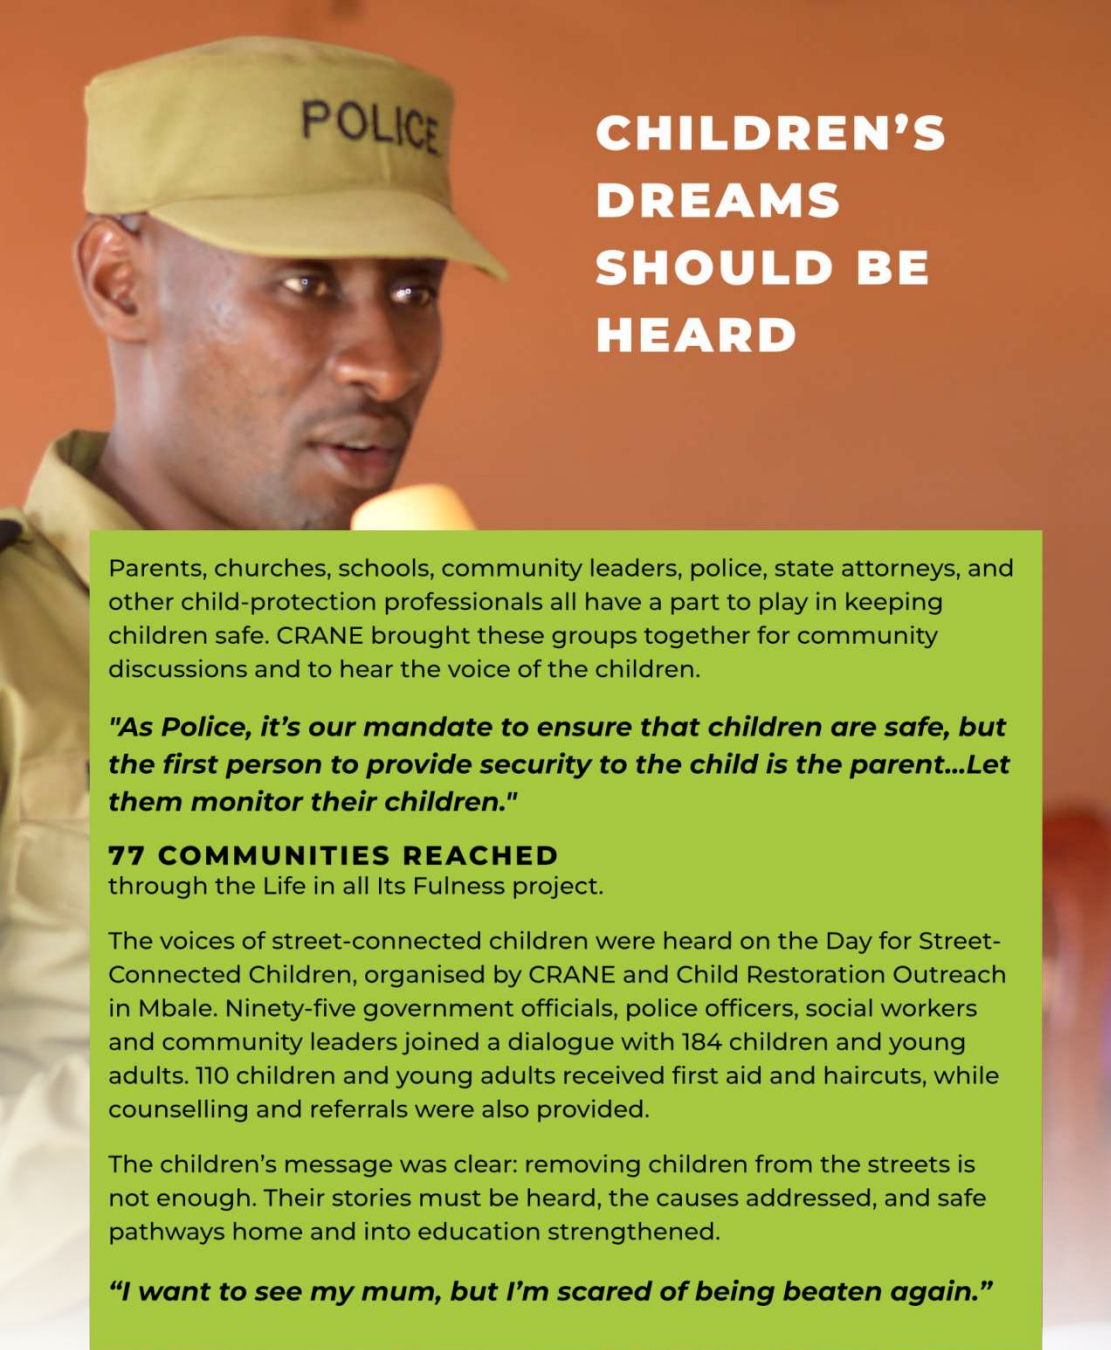

Growing up brings new questions and responsibilities. Children need opportunities to learn about their bodies, dignity and personal responsibility. Through sessions preparing children for adolescence, CRANE helped children explore these themes from a Christian perspective, encouraging them to understand their worth, make informed choices and approach this stage of life with confidence and respect for themselves and others.

Children learned about online safety, respectful behaviour and positive leadership. They explored how their words and actions affect others, and how to protect their own privacy and safety online. This included understanding doxxing—the sharing of someone's private or identifying information online without their permission, which can put them at risk.

"I am going to tell my friends to stop doxxing and limit their use of internet"

"It taught me that my body is the temple of the Holy Spirit and we should honour God with our bodies and be pure"

CHILDREN'S DREAMS SHOULD BE HEARD

Parents, churches, schools, community leaders, police, state attorneys, and other child-protection professionals all have a part to play in keeping children safe. CRANE brought these groups together for community discussions and to hear the voice of the children.

"As Police, it's our mandate to ensure that children are safe, but the first person to provide security to the child is the parent...Let them monitor their children."

77 COMMUNITIES REACHED
through the Life in all Its Fulness project.

The voices of street-connected children were heard on the Day for Street-Connected Children, organised by CRANE and Child Restoration Outreach in Mbale. Ninety-five government officials, police officers, social workers and community leaders joined a dialogue with 184 children and young adults. 110 children and young adults received first aid and haircuts, while counselling and referrals were also provided.

The children's message was clear: removing children from the streets is not enough. Their stories must be heard, the causes addressed, and safe pathways home and into education strengthened.

"I want to see my mum, but I'm scared of being beaten again."

WHEN PROTECTION MUST BECOME ACTION

Prevention is vital, but some children need help now. Children can face abuse, neglect, abandonment, exploitation or difficulties involving the justice system.

During the project, CRANE worked with child protection partners to respond to cases involving children in need of protection and children in conflict with the law. Responses included support towards appropriate placements and family reintegration.

Positive parenting helps children grow up in safe, nurturing environments where they feel loved, respected and supported. Through its work with families and communities, CRANE promotes parenting approaches that strengthen relationships, encourage positive discipline and support children's wellbeing and development.

Testimonials from parents offer a glimpse into how positive parenting training has influenced attitudes, transformed family relationships and shaped the way caregivers understand and respond to children's needs. One parent shared with us his story: "I used to be tough on children without even listening to them." Through positive parenting training, this caregiver discovered that raising children well does not mean being harsh. It means listening, speaking kindly, avoiding comparisons and giving children room to learn from their mistakes. The training also prompted a deeper reflection on how authoritarian parenting can pass from one generation to the next. Now, the commitment is to build stronger family relationships through patience, understanding and positive discipline—and to share these lessons with other parents in the church. Because safer childhoods begin with adults willing to change.

BECOMING RESPONSIBLE, CARING FATHERS

We've seen the beginning of breakthrough with men by calling them to a men-only dialogue and talking about how to make happier homes and deal with conflict. Parents and caregivers do not always have positive examples of parenting to draw on, and family relationships can be strained by conflict and difficult circumstances.

Through Responsible Fatherhood Discussions and positive parenting training, CRANE supported fathers, parents and caregivers to reflect on their experiences and explore more positive ways of raising children.

CHILDREN ARE THRIVING – JOHN 10:10

Children know their worth, build resilience and thrive in nurturing families and communities

CRANE helped churches strengthen their understanding of child protection, engage parents and community leaders, and create safe spaces where children could learn and speak up. Church leaders explored God's heart for children, while mentors reviewed Safe Club activities and the importance of following appropriate channels when reporting child protection concerns. The result was a growing recognition that keeping children safe is not an optional ministry, but a responsibility shared by the whole church.

FAITH THAT CHANGES HOW ADULTS CARE

CRANE equipped church leaders and parents to build stronger family relationships, encourage one another through difficult times and recognise children as people deserving of dignity. Training also explored how parents could become advocates for positive change in their churches and communities.

Child ambassadors created opportunities for dialogue, using music, drama and poetry to raise issues affecting children directly with adults. These conversations helped bring children's experiences into community discussions and gave adults an opportunity to respond.

A PLACE TO BELONG — CHILDREN DISCOVER LIFE IN ALL ITS FULNESS

BACK TO FAMILY — HELPING CHILDREN FIND A SAFE PLACE TO GROW

Churches continued running Safe Clubs where children explored relevant life lessons, developed their understanding of personal safety and engaged with their faith. CRANE trained Safe Club leaders in leadership, mental health and resilience, and the safe use of media. Child ambassadors also learned about their bodies, growing up and keeping themselves safe.

Christmas gatherings brought children from member churches together around the message that Jesus came to give life in all its fulness.

Through its child protection work, CRANE supported children with a range of needs, including family reintegration, medical assistance, transport, access to justice, meals and other basic necessities. Some children also received support through childcare institutions as part of their rehabilitation.

During the reporting period covered by the programme figures, 113 children were reintegrated with their families, helping them return to family-based care. The wider response demonstrated that protecting children involves more than responding to abuse: it also means helping children access the care and support they need to thrive.

DEALING WITH AND PREVENTING TRAUMA

We are deeply privileged to be part of women and men dealing with their own life trauma and learning to stop that from recurring in the lives of their children. When mentors come for training about how to work with children, they leave having learned that their current emotional state is often a result of their own childhood trauma. As they learn how to help children, they also find strategies to deal with their own history.

"Learn to show love to your children."

"I passed through a lot when I was young. I didn't know it was trauma. I am going to go and deal with my trauma"

TWENTY YEARS OF FOSTER CARE

Twenty years ago, Dr. Justin Amery and Dr. Karen Amery committed to support twenty children to be in foster families as they could not be adopted and they could not go back to their own families.

Today 14 of those children have matured out of this long-term pilot whilst Dr. Karen Amery and friends continue to support 6 children.

We honour the legacy of Dr. Justin Amery who invested in the lives of these children and many other children through Hospice Africa.

PARENTS LEARN NURTURING PATHWAYS

Every mother deserves the knowledge, support and resources to give her child a healthy start in life. Through its Maternal and Child Health programme, CRANE worked with 18 peer educators to bring health information, counselling and referrals directly to families in Namuwongo, Busunju and Bwaise.

"I do door to door outreaches. I show the mothers what the problem is and together we find a solution. A healthy child gives me joy, but a sick child makes me sad."

"I didn't know what to do with my child with special needs. But Jane, the Peer Educator, came when I wanted to commit suicide. She encouraged me and told me my child was not cursed. Jane referred me to a CRANE member. Now my child eats like all other children."

HELPING PARENTS KEEP THEIR BABIES SAFE

A particular focus of CRANE's Maternal and Child Health Work was preventing sudden unexpected infant deaths. After training, mothers receive baby boxes to provide safer sleeping spaces for newborns. Mothers in the slums are navigating poverty, isolation and difficult circumstances. Through home visits, follow-up and compassionate support, peer educators helped caregivers build confidence, adopt safer practices and access services for their children.

CHILDREN ARE LEARNING

Every child finds a pathway to learn, including those excluded from conventional classrooms.

CREATIVE LEARNING CENTRE: RESTORING HOPE THROUGH LEARNING

We are delighted that one of the Churches in the city that hosted a Creative Learning Centre is still open, giving children who are out of school a pathway back to education.

Each term, the Centre supports 10 children with accelerated learning and literacy and numeracy skills, preparing them to re-enter formal schooling.

The Pastor describes seeing transformation within just a fortnight: children who arrive withdrawn begin to smile, hold their heads high and grow in confidence.

In a safe, loving and nurturing environment, they rediscover their worth, their potential and the possibility of a brighter future.

STRONGER SCHOOLS THROUGH COLLABORATION

The Education Working Group brought members together to share knowledge, strengthen school practices and address issues affecting children's learning and wellbeing.

Through quarterly meetings, members explored practical approaches to improving support for learners, strengthening relationships between teachers and children, and creating safer, more supportive school environments.

The group encouraged collaboration and the sharing of skills and experience among member schools, helping translate collective learning into practical action.

HOUSE OF JOY NURSERY & PRIMARY SCHOOL

House of Joy provides a safe, supportive environment where children are valued and encouraged to fulfil their potential. Its inclusive, quality education combines academic learning with character development, creativity and individual support. Children love the open spaces, creative teaching, and the kind teachers.

Managed by CRANE and led by a former Girls' Education Challenge teacher, House of Joy offers day and boarding places. With fun outdoor spaces, and a firm commitment to non-violence, it provides a model of quality education at an affordable cost. Places are available for children where they can feel safe, enjoy learning and thrive.

House of Joy is founded on a mission to provide an inclusive, creative, eco-friendly learning environment. At House of Joy, the classroom has no walls. Our blend of indoor and outdoor learning brings lessons to life. We tap into every child's unique talents through sports, animal therapy, and music. We have cultivated a friendly, safe environment where every child feels seen and valued. We are empowering children to become creative, capable, and caring leaders of tomorrow.

ART FUN DAY

The Art Fun Day gave children the opportunity to express themselves, explore their imaginations and share their ideas through colour and art. The event celebrated their creativity and individual abilities, allowing learners to take pride in their work and discover new ways of communicating. It reflected House of Joy's commitment to an education that goes beyond the classroom, helping children develop confidence, curiosity and the freedom to express who they are.

HELPING CHILDREN MANAGE THEIR EMOTIONS BY CARING FOR ANIMALS

Rabbit-assisted therapy uses gentle, supervised interaction with rabbits to support children's emotional wellbeing, build confidence and encourage empathy and responsibility. Through caring for and interacting with the animals, children can experience comfort, develop trust and express emotions in a calm, supportive environment.

CRANE staff have been surprised by how great an impact animal therapy has in the lives of children.

"I feel great every time I do this."

"Children are slowly becoming responsible. Those who were quiet - as they interact with the rabbits are speaking out of the blue"

MEMBERS ARE LEARNING

During the year, 88 CRANE members participated in QIS training, covering six modules. Members translated learning into practical action points to strengthen organisational systems, accountability and service delivery.

CRANE's QIS mentors reinforced this learning through follow-up calls and visits, helping to face challenges and implement improvements.

Cluster group sessions helped peers to make practical, sustainable improvements in organisational performance and the quality of services provided to children and communities.
